

Ranieri's Reward?

Recently, the media has been surrounding Leicester City after the sacking of former manager Claudio Ranieri. Although multiple managers have been sacked in recent times, the most speculation was surrounding him.

A little over 9 months after Ranieri led Leicester to one of the greatest successes in Premier League history, he was given his marching orders by the Leicester City board. The decision by the board brought much attention from the media, and ex professional football stars – many saying it was unfair and “Unlike football” to fire Ranieri.

Despite the incredible success during the 2015-2016 season, Leicester currently sit just one point above the relegation zone, a dangerous tight-rope for the Foxes to be walking. With just 13 games remaining, the premier league dreams are in jeopardy for Leicester.

Although Ranieri helped make history for the Foxes within European Football by reaching the last 16 during his time with Leicester his 2-1 loss to Saville was the tipping point for the Leicester owners. And within 24 hours, Ranieri was sacked.

The owners stand by their decision, yet since Ranieri left the club, Leicester have been knocked out of the FA Cup by Championship side Millwall.

The Foxes cruised to victory last season and won the Premier League by 10 points but have only won just seven top-flight games this season, and are at risk of being the first team to be relegated after winning the league title since 1938.

In his final statement, Ranieri wrote “My Dream has died.”
