Dear Parents/Carers

Whilst students are currently preparing for their mock exams in a range of subjects, we are pleased to provide some additional resources to support their independent revision.

Students can access materials in almost every subject that they study, for a wide range of units by visiting the following website: <https://students.pixl.org.uk>

They then need to use the login details below which are the same for every student as it is simply a generic login across the whole school.

PiXL School Number: 202960
Password: Indep13

All students in Years 10 and 11 have been shown the website in a special assembly last week and have been given the login (but is it worth keeping for your reference in case they forget it). There will be occasions where certain sections of the booklets will be set by teaching staff as part of their HW. However, the website allows students to go above and beyond their normal HW by revising independently and completing a range of tasks based on what they know they need to improve on in each subject.

They can earn different numbers of credits by completing a range of tasks. When evidence of this independent learning is shown to teaching staff they will be rewarded varying levels of commendations based on how much they have done, or the difficulty level of the tasks chosen.

Hopefully this means that they will have even more resources to help them achieve their true potential, and you will be able to direct them to definite revision tasks to complete in addition to HW set throughout the next two years.

It is also worth remembering that the Mathswatch website and Tassomai website in particular are highly effective, so constant pushing towards both of these are highly beneficial.

Yours faithfully
