Headteacher's message

To mark this year's Remembrance day, we have held a whole school assembly to explore what it means to be in service to the country, which is particularly poignant based on the fact that approximately 40% of our pupils come from Services families. During the assembly, Miss Harris explained the relevance and the history behind 'The Hauntings' statue that currently features outside of Antrobus House as he is believed to bear a resemblance to the house's namesake. After Christmas short visits to the statue will be arranged for year 8, linked to their curriculum.

Pupils then focused on what Remembrance means in relation to The Royal British Legion and the symbol of the poppy, and who it is that we specifically remember at this time based on the sacrifices they have made, and their contribution.

Mr Rogers then played 'The Last Post' in our atrium, joined by large numbers of pupils to mark the silence that we held across the whole school. Tutors then followed this up by exploring specific case studies with all pupils relating to service and remembrance.

Our Head Boy and Head Girl, Mackenzie and Alisa will be reading the names of the fallen at the town's Remembrance ceremony on Sunday.

Trafalgar Day Parade

On the 16th of October 2022, I was privileged to join my Royal Marine Detachment to march in marking the Trafalgar Day parade.

Our starting point of the parade was Trafalgar square with is very significant to the whole parade. The veterans, cadets, and all the forces marched through London City and ended up at the Wellington Barracks.

Famously, the parade has been known as the Trafalgar day parade where we celebrate Sir Lord Nelson's great victory over the French naval battalion in an overseas battle. I had a phenomenal experience meeting different people across the country with a different cultures. I gained a lot of skills from these three days both in the barracks and on the field.

For this reason, I am anticipating another opportunity for such experience, next year to represent the Southern part of England.
